At least half of the faction must be armed with a pistol as their sole ranged weapon. If mounted Characters are permitted in the Scene, then one mounted Character may be equipped with a lasso. "A Hog Killin' Time" and "Crazy as a Loon" may not be used in the same turn; only one is permitted to be played in a single turn. "Life Ain't Worth Spit" is used all of the time.

Life Ain't Worth Spit
Desperados may shoot into Hand to Hand fights. To shoot into Hand to Hand, simply declare actions and roll the dice as normal. Randomise which character is hit with each successful shot by drawing a card from the deck. An even card (2, 4, 6, 8, or 10) indicates a friendly character is hit, any other card indicates an opposing character is hit. Desperados also ignore the Nerve test required when the Outlaw "Hostage" card is played (randomise the hit as described above).

A Hog Killin' Time
May be used once per turn at the end of a pistol armed character's actions, as long as the character is not benefiting from substantial cover. The player may declare that the character is taking a further, bonus Shoot action. Apply all normal modifers to the shot (there is no additional modifer to this fourth shot), resolve the action and then place an Under Fire marker on the shooter. This may result in your own character going out of action.

Crazy as a Loon
Once per game, as a desperate measure, the player may activate this ability. It is declared at the start of a turn, before any characters are activated. The ability ignores the need for the Desperado player's characters to take Nerve tests for the whole turn; even a "Yellow Belly" card won't work on them. Use a marker to denote Nerve tests that have been "dodged" in this manner. At the end of the turn, roll a D10 for each of these "dodged" tests; any rolls of 1-5 count as failed and hit markers are applied. Naturally, this may result in a lot of folks dropping dead at the end of the turn.

Faction Cards

J ♣ "Stand it like a man... and give some back."

Play at any time. All Nerve tests are taken with no negative modifiers. Stays in play until a member of the player's faction fails a Nerve test.

Do they even know who they're messing with? There's nothing they can do to unnerve you or any of your gang. You've rode through the Gates of Hell together, this place and it's people are nothing.

Death keeps his own time, how's about you help him out and give that fool a hand along the way?

Q ♣ The Shootist

Play on one of your own characters when they are activated. All non-shotgun shots against a single opponent count as aimed and ignore all negative modifers.

Q ♣

K ♣ We started together, we'll end it together

Play at any time during the turn. All of your characters may ignore the negative to hit modifiers for having Under Fire markers this turn.

K ♣

Just one final push and this thing will be over. You cry out to the rest of the gang, "No more messing around!". They know what you mean, let's get this done.

Your pistols are playing a tune now, best to keep up with the rhythm and not stop until you're truly finished. Sometimes you could do with just a few more shots, especially if you have managed to get a few opponents gathered together in one place.

A ♣ "I've always been lucky when it comes to killin' folks."

Play on one of your own characters when it is taking at least two Shoot actions. If the final shot is a hit, then up to 3 further shots can be taken at the same target (or another target within 10cm if the first is out of action) as long as further "hits" are rolled. Each of these additional shots is at the same modifier as the last Shoot action.
