OUTLAWS

At least half of the faction must be armed with a pistol as their sole ranged weapon. If mounted Characters are permitted in the Scene, then one mounted Character may be equipped with a lasso. "Above Snakes" and "Cheatin'" may not be used in the same turn; only one is permitted to be played in a single turn.

Above Snakes

Once per turn a character in the Outlaw faction may choose to Duck Back as normal, but after the Duck Back must take a Nerve test. If passed this does not "burn the activation" but counts as a single action taken. Place a Move marker to indicate this. If the Duck Back is nullified by the use of the 7 card, the ability is wasted for the turn. Taunts of "lily-liveredness" may need to be endured…

Cheatin'

Once per game, after all the Initiative cards have been revealed, with a smile on their face the Outlaw player may declare that they're Cheatin'. They can swap one of the cards in their Hand for one of their Initiative cards on the table. The new card in the hand may either be played straight away or held for use later in the game.

OUTLAWS

Faction Cards

J ♠

Dying Shot

Play as soon as one of your own characters is put out of action by enemy shooting. The character immediately takes a single shot with no modifers whatsoever against the opposing character that put it out of action.

J ♠

If you're going to lose a character, the least you can do is try to take the responsible fool out of action as well. Pick up the D20, blow on it for good luck and get to work.

Q ♠

Hostage

One of your characters grabs a bystander to use as a shield. The character uses 3 actions as normal but no more than one move action per turn. Opposing characters must pass a Nerve test to declare a shoot action against the outlaw. Under Fire results kill the hostage. If the outlaw is hit, the hostage escapes. If the hostage dies, the outlaws immediately draw a bonus card for their hand.

Q ♠

This card basically gives your character a bit of a shield. First any opponents are going to need to pass a Nerve test to even shoot at you, and if they do, an Under Fire result will not hit you but lead to the death of the hostage and give you another card! A plan with no drawbacks; well none for you that is.

K ♠ "You should have killed me when you had the chance"

Play when one of your characters is put out of action by enemy shooting. The character takes up to two immediate Move actions. Following the move, as long as it gets into cover or out of sight of all opposing characters, the character is left on the table with three Under Fire markers. Otherwise it is removed from play as normal. This burns the characters activation if it hadn't already activated.

K ♠

This card if used properly will save one of your Characters who would normally be pushing up daisies. Just make sure there's some cover nearby for you to escape to.

A ♠ "With a gun in his hand, nothing stands in his way."

There are times when you absolutely have to put an enemy down. Use this card to make sure it happens, especially useful if you play it on your Gunslinger, that could lead to the removal of more than one of your opponents.

A ♠

Play on one of your own characters when it is activated. All shots (including from shotguns) fired this turn count as if they were aimed and ignore any negative modifers.
